ARREST OF HEAD OF SCHOOL THAT TURNED THEM OUT.

Government Alleges Use of the Mails to pefraud-Concern in Brooklyn Had Many Pupils and Was Taking in a Lot of Money -Graluates Disappointed.

A school where during the last two or three years one might learn to be a brake man or railway fireman and which, accord ing to the postal authorities, has had about 2,000 pupils a year and has been doing a yearly business of from $30,000 to $40,000 temporarily stopped business shortly after noon yesterday when George R. Baker, a well dressed man 52 years old, president and general manager of the Educational Association of Brooklyn, was arrested on a charge of obtaining money through fraudulent use of the

Paul J. Gallagher, said to be secretary of the school, and John A. Jenkins, listed as a member of the board of directors of the institution, also were told by the post office inspectors that they were wanted and they voluntarily went to the Federal Building in Washington street, Brooklyn, shortly after Baker had beer arrested at the school's elaborate offices at 227 Monroe street a few minu es after he had returned from luncheon

The complainants, none of whose name was given out by the postal authorities, said that they had paid either $15 to learn to be brakemen or $20 to become firemer on the written agreement that the school "literature" guaranteed that upon completion of either course a student would get a job on a railway within thirty days or the tuition money would be refunded. When a number of the graduates applied for jobs on railroads as far west as the Santa Fé and to the north as far as Winnipeg the railroad authorities upon finding that the graduates could not pass the physical tests required by railroad men everywhere—ability to distinguish colors and other sight tests, physical strength to do the work required, to read and write well enough to turn in simple reports, Ac—would not accept the men despite their school course. And some of the complainants say that then after paying out much money to get to places far disparents.
